Rendacium - Press Release

"Punk is back", as are Rendacium with their latest single Love Me For a Day taken directly from their upcoming album [name to be announced soon]. Putting their unique spin on the classic punk rock genre, Love Me For a Day really captures a new deeper, more rebellious and thoughtful side of the band - not yet seen before.

Louis quotes: "this song is about putting your middle finger up to society and the people who tell you that you can't love someone because of who they are, whether it's because their race or because of their gender or sexuality, it doesn't matter, what matters is that you be who you wanna be and love whoever you wanna love because that's what's important. Don't let anyone take that away from you."

*"We're just two weird freaks
Who ended up in love
Society screwed that up"*

Brad states: "We picked this song to release first off the album because we felt like it best captured where we're going with the new era of Rendacium. We have quite a diverse range of songs on the album and Love Me For a Day perfectly represents what's to come."

Louis: "We're not going to compromise who we are for the people that don't want to acknowledge our voice. This song comes from the heart"

In mid 2020, during the peak of the Coronavirus pandemic, Rendacium began working with an internationally renowned music producer, however, after an agreement could not be reached between the band, music producer and management company and after seeking legal advice Rendacium made the decision to walk away from both the producer and management company going back to being totally independent.

Despite the current situation regarding the pandemic, Rendacium remain passionate about performing live with new bass player Ben Saccone and a brand new catalogue of original music that features distinctive and impactful songwriting - taking inspiration off of punk legends Sex Pistols as well as pop - punkers McFly, YUNGBLUD and Green Day to mention but a few.

The lads are excited to embark on their 'new era' with a new album coming up and ambitious plans for the remainder of 2020.

Love Me For a Day will be released across all streaming platforms on November 17th at 5pm GMT.
